FOR LOVERS, DUTY IS ONLY NATURAL

Ask any parent who gets up at 2:00 am and then at 3:00 am and then at 3:30 am to answer the cry of a sick baby. Lovers never ask, "What's the least I can do?"

Ask any man whose income is so limited that after he pays his rent and buys his groceries he has only pennies to spare. But his sweetheart has a birthday the next month and he has his eye on something that means he'll have to go without lunch for three weeks. So he buys it.

Boys' Town near Omaha has made capital of a poster showing a little guy toting a tyke nearly as big as he is, saying, "He's not heavy, he's my brother."

Are any of these lovers looking for a medal? No. They are only doing their duty. And it is only natural.

Our relationship to Christ is like that. For although Jesus may have been cracking a small joke when he portrayed how ludicrous it could have been if the master served the slave, yet that ridiculous reversal of roles is just what took place in the Upper Room when the Master served the disciples, washing their feet. It was symbolic of his entire ministry, including the cross.

MOTHER'S GUIDING LIGHT

In her embrace, warmth and might,
 Every lesson, a beacon so bright.
 God's love, through her hands does flow,
 Guiding me, wherever I go.
 Her voice, a whisper of divine say,
 Echoes Christ, in every way.
 In her prayers, in tears she'd shed,
 She walks the path He has led.
 For in her faith, so strong and true,
 God's grace shines brightly through.
 Mother, with love so profound,
 In your embrace, heaven is found.
